MARKET COMMENTARY

During July, we saw enough daily headlines to last an entire year, especially in the U.S. Early in July we saw an attempted assassination attempt of the former President Donald Trump, the current U.S. President U.S. Joe Biden pushed off the Democrat ticket, and the ascension of his Vice President Kamala Harris to the ticket, thus altering the course of the election cycle in the U.S. Further, soft economic data in the U.S. regarding jobs and manufacturing output brought the word “recession” back into the realm of possibilities. Outside the U.S., we saw central banks in Canada, the UK, and other western-oriented central banks lowering rates while Japan raised rates. Finally, China has continued to garner headlines for the wrong reasons as the economy has failed to recover post COVID on the back of underwhelming stimulus by the government. This latter point may be somewhat forgivable as there has been a lot of rhetoric around tariffs and the fact that the U.S. Federal Reserve (the Fed) has continued to maintain tighter rates causing China to pause until there is greater clarity.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

Avantor, Inc. positively contributed to relative performance during the month after being among the top detractors in June. As we noted at the time, Avantor came under pressure after a peer reported poor results. However, in the month the company reported better execution than expected, with EBITDA margins improving on the back of pricing, mix, and cost controls. Further, free cash flow conversion was the strongest it has been over the last ten quarters despite recognizing some one-time costs. Management maintained full year guidance in a move that we see as conservative but appreciate nonetheless.

Newmont Corporation contributed positively to relative performance during the month on the back of improving gold prices given market concerns about softening economic fundamentals. The company benefitted not only from a higher gold price but also stronger than expected production. We believe that given its strong free cash flow and potential asset sales, Newmont should provide strong shareholder returns and we remain positive on the stock.

Merck & Co., Inc. detracted from relative performance in the month. Merck reported top line revenue and EPS growth and guided largely in line with expectations. Challenges in the month were due to a slowdown in China sales in one of Merck's vaccine drugs, Gardasil, and concerns about potential competition from Chinese companies increasing in this space. We believe Merck will be able to manage through this and remain holders of the shares.

Carnival Corporation detracted from relative performance in July after being among the top contributors in June. Concerns about softening economic fundamentals outweighed lower fuel costs and potentially stronger than expected pricing. We continue to believe Carnival offers a good risk/reward profile.

OUTLOOK

Despite the muted market returns in July, sentiment shift may be afoot, as we have seen material rotations over the last month. We note the large spread (+20%) between small cap stocks and the NASDAQ; as measured by the Russell 2000 Index small cap stocks were up more than 10% in the month. That said, this may not be sustained if economic concerns broaden, as small cap stocks are likely to be hurt in this scenario. Softening economic numbers and stagnant inflation over the last few months have all but guaranteed a rate cut by the Fed in September. This will come on the heels of other central banks that have already cut. However, the issue regarding cutting rates is less about who is cutting and when that first rate comes, but more about why rates are being cut. If the Fed and other central banks have to move quickly in cutting historically high rates as a result of softening economic growth versus sufficiently tame inflation, it will pull the soft-landing scenario off the table and we could continue to see a violent rotation away from high multiple stocks in favour of lower multiple stocks. This may be further aggravated if we do officially enter into a recession. The Fund has been tilted more to the defensive areas of the market over the last few years. This positioning, though challenging for performance over the last 12-18 months, has allowed the strategy to provide downside protection – not only in the rotating markets in July, but during August to date as we deal with markets continuing to stumble.
